Downloaded from: justpaste.it/3z7y

Pittsburgh Steelers vs Washington Redskins: TV Info, Spread, Injury Updates, Game Time and More

The marquee game of the week will be the first edition of Monday Night Football in 2013, featuring the Pittsburgh Steelers taking on the Washington Redskins in a fierce AFC-NFC battle.

While injuries and offseason turnover have both teams trying to find an identity, this Week 2 battle should be an excellent showcase of where each franchise stands as they prepare for the regular season.

WATCH LIVE HERE

Where: FedEx Field, Landover, Md.

When: Monday, August 19 at 8 p.m. ET

Watch: ESPN

Live Stream: Preseason Live

Betting Line (via Covers)

Over/Under: 38; Spread: Washington (-1)

Betting on preseason football is incredibly tough because of the starters being pulled at various times, but this matchup should be a lock for the over. The spread proves that this is a coin flip, but you should take the Redskins giving the point to the Steelers.

Steelers vs. Redskins: TV Info, Spread, Injury Updates, Game Time and More

BY DONALD WOOD (FEATURED COLUMNIST) ON AUGUST 19, 2013

411 reads 3 Icon_comment

SHARE TWEET

Use your ← → (arrow) keys to browse more storiesNext

Hi-res-83551308_crop_north Al Bello/Getty Images

The marquee game of the week will be the first edition of Monday Night Football in 2013, featuring the Pittsburgh Steelers taking on the Washington Redskins in a fierce AFC-NFC battle.

While injuries and offseason turnover have both teams trying to find an identity, this Week 2 battle should be an excellent showcase of where each franchise stands as they prepare for the regular season.

Where: FedEx Field, Landover, Md.

When: Monday, August 19 at 8 p.m. ET

Watch: ESPN

Live Stream: Preseason Live

Listen: Online at NFL Audio Pass

Hi-res-156705320_crop_exact

Justin K. Aller/Getty Images

Betting Line (via Covers)

Over/Under: 38; Spread: Washington (-1)

Betting on preseason football is incredibly tough because of the starters being pulled at various times, but this matchup should be a lock for the over. The spread proves that this is a coin flip, but you should take the Redskins giving the point to the Steelers.

Hi-res-7575388_crop_exact
Geoff Burke-USA TODAY Sports
Injury Report (via ESPN)

Steelers

Heath Miller, TE, Out (knee)

Le'Veon Bell, RB, Questionable (knee)

Redskins

Robert Griffin III, QB, Out (knee)

Brian Orakpo, LB, Questionable (thigh)

Richard Crawford, CB, Questionable (knee)

Josh Morgan, WR, Questionable (leg)

Pittsburgh’s Player to Watch: Ben Roethlisberger, QB

The Pittsburgh Steelers lost high-profile wide receiver Mike Wallace via free agency, and how Ben Roethlisberger rebounds from the loss will depict how much success the franchise has during the 2013 campaign.

After going 4-of-8 passing in the team's Week 1 matchup with just 36 yards, Big Ben is looking to bounce back with a huge game that showcases the deep-passing ability of the Steelers and the dump-off throws that make Pittsburgh so dangerous.

The hope is that the knee injury that has plagued Roethlisberger over the offseason will not inhibit the veteran's chances of being as effective as he needs to be for the Steelers to contend for a Super Bowl this season.