

Broadway Star Ariana DeBose's BAFTA Performance Goes Viral After Impromptu Rap

Ariana DeBose is speaking out after her show-stopping performance at the 2023 BAFTA Awards. The Broadway star, who made a name for herself in productions like Hamilton and The Prom, opened the ceremony with a powerful performance that quickly went viral. Her rousing rendition of “Sisters Are Doin’ It for Themselves” and “We Are Family” was impressive on its own, but it was her impromptu rap that stole the show.

In the rap, DeBose celebrated the many talented women nominated at the BAFTAs and gave a shoutout to Angela Bassett, who she said “did the thing.” The moment quickly became a social media sensation, with fans and fellow celebrities alike praising DeBose for her electrifying performance.

On Instagram, DeBose shared a series of images and videos from the BAFTA Awards, including several with famous faces like Lizzo, Adele, and Halle Berry. “The internet is wild y’all!” she captioned the post. “Appreciate all the love.”

DeBose’s performance was more than just a moment of entertainment; it was a powerful statement about the importance of women in the film industry. By highlighting the achievements of female nominees and performers, she shone a light on the many talented women who are often overlooked in the male-dominated world of Hollywood.

As DeBose continues to rise to the top of her field, she remains committed to using her platform to inspire and empower others. Her performance at the BAFTAs was just one example of how she is using her talent and voice to make a difference. We can't wait to see what she does next.

Read also: Babalón's "Scream": The Rise of an Indie-Electro-Pop Sensation

Viral Rap

In another video, Adele can be seen chatting with the audience while sitting next to a piano during her Las Vegas residency. The Grammy-winning singer joked, "We did learn that Angela Bassett did the thing, didn't we? I love her though. I love Ariana."

The post also included a screenshot of a tweet from Halle Berry referencing the rap and a photo of a bouquet that comedian Wanda Sykes gave DeBose after the show. In an accompanying note, Sykes wrote, "I loved it! You did the thing."

DeBose's viral rap has garnered praise from fans and fellow celebrities alike for its empowering message and celebration of female talent. It's clear that her performance has left a lasting impact on the entertainment industry, and we can't wait to see what she does next. The rap went viral on social media and was turned into a meme, which drew criticism and negative comments from some users.

However, show producer Nick Bullen spoke out in defense of DeBose, saying that the rap was meant to celebrate the achievements of women in film and recognize DeBose's talent as a woman of color at the top of her game.

"I think it's incredibly unfair, to be frank," Bullen told Variety. "That rap section in the middle, mentioning the women in the room, was because it's been a great year for women in film, and we wanted to celebrate that. And here is a woman of color who is at the absolute top of her game. And she's opening the BAFTAs with a song that said so much on so many levels."

DeBose Performance

DeBose's performance was a powerful and empowering moment that recognized the achievements of women in the industry and celebrated diversity and representation. It's unfortunate that some individuals chose to focus on a small portion of the performance and use it as a basis for criticism.

As DeBose continues to use her platform to advocate for change and inspire others, it's important to recognize the impact of her work and the importance of celebrating diversity and representation in the industry. The backlash faced by DeBose highlights the ongoing need for increased representation and inclusivity in the entertainment industry and society as a whole. As a rising star in the industry, DeBose continues to inspire others with her talent and voice. Her message of empowerment and inclusivity is more important than ever, and we can't wait to see her use her platform to make a positive difference. Ariana DeBose truly did the thing at the 2023 BAFTA Awards, and her impact will be felt for years to come.

Ariana DeBose is a Broadway actress, singer, and dancer known for her powerful performances and commitment to advocating for diversity and representation in the entertainment industry.

She has appeared in numerous productions, including Hamilton, A Bronx Tale, and Summer: The Donna Summer Musical, and has been recognized for her talents with Tony and Drama Desk Award nominations.

Born in North Carolina, DeBose began dancing at a young age and eventually attended the Musical Theatre Program at the University of Cincinnati's College-Conservatory of Music. After graduating, she made her Broadway debut in Bring It On: The Musical and went on to appear in a number of other productions, including Pippin, Motown: The Musical, and Hamilton...Read More

Read also: Eminem Blocks Real Housewives of Potomac Stars From Trademarking "Reasonably Shady"

Source: Entertainment Monthly News