Marihelen stands up and speaks out for what is right.

"I've advocated for the needs of children and teachers inside and outside of the classroom for over thirty years. In addition to resources for a quality education, I've fought for clean water to drink, smart development decisions, living wages, and opportunities for success for every child. I will continue to fight for a better future for everyone in Alachua County."

An advocate for our environment

For decades, Marihelen has fought to protect our rivers, lakes, and springs. She actively opposes the Sabal Trail pipeline, the proposed phosphate mines, and other threats to our drinking water. She advocates for smart development that supports our local economy and environment.

An advocate for a strong community

A strong community needs a strong local economy, a focus on equity, and cultural resources. Marihelen has fought for a living wage and supports local businesses which allow our community to thrive. She is an art educator and actively encourages our local sources of art and culture.

A fierce advocate for children

Marihelen retired from teaching after 38 years (22 years in Alachua County public schools). She taught children with different needs, including exceptional and ESOL students, and adolescent girls in the juvenile justice system. She fights for access to a quality education that children deserve.
