

The Purpose of Pergolas: History and Current Needs

With the evolution of technology, many inventions have also been brought up in the pergola constructions. Traditionally, pergolas were those outdoor structures used mainly to grow climbers, vines, and other shade-loving plants. As a result, pergolas were considered an essential part of garden styling in the 19th and 20th centuries.

Undoubtedly, these pergolas are appreciated in today's modern architecture, but more for their aesthetic looks than their utility or purpose. In fact, pergolas are used today for various purposes, including outdoor dining spaces, party halls, and even recreational areas.

You can now have a wide range of options in designs and styles to build a pergola as per your taste in your landscape or backyard. Additionally, various materials are now available in Dubai's market to choose from – different types and textures of wood, aluminium, and vinyl. Let's have a look at the journey of the pergolas to reach this level:

Evolution of Pergolas

- Beginning of the Journey

It has been more than a thousand years for pergolas to be a part of the architecture.

Historically, they were renowned as a prominent feature of luxury gardens built in the 19th and 20th centuries. At that time, most people used pergolas as a garden extension to grow their shade-loving plants and style climbers and vines.

Moreover, there were mainly wooden pergolas in ancient times as no other material was prevalent in the market. In fact, there was another set of people who used stone pillars and bricks to construct their pergolas. Since only a few options were available in terms of design and material, that's why pergolas in Dubai's space looked the same and similar in every aspect.

- Today's Scenario

With the passage of time, the demand for pergolas has also increased dramatically.

Nowadays, they are being used as a house extension by the modern generation. In fact, people love to experiment with their pergolas to enhance the beauty of their space and improve their quality of life.

You can now have a large variety of options for your pergola designs with an array of pergola materials that range from different types of wood to fiberglass and CVC. Moreover,
