We went into debt though less for projects and more towards entitlements. Our wars were less against countries and more towards combating terrorism although the costs weren't any less significant. We have certainly had our share of state takeover of personal debts. The bailouts of 2008-2009 moved private debt towards anyone. More surreptitiously, the unofficial financial arm from the government (the Fed), has undertaken an enormous acquisition of public and private debt since 2008 for the tune of trillions. The majority of the private debt is in the form of home loans. This Fed action does not allow rational pricing in the industry and is likely to distort markets.
