The ANATOMY of a GLOVE

KNOW THE DIFFERENT GLOVE TYPES

BAG GLOVES

Designed to accustom your knuckles to harder impact.

Usually stiff and don't form well to a curved fist.

Cheaper than most types of gloves, with prices ranging from $20 to $100.

TRAINING GLOVES

Serve as all-purpose gloves although some are not thick enough for sparring.

Training gloves price range - $30 to $200.

A basic pair of long-lasting and supportive gloves will cost between $70 and $90.

SPARRING GLOVES

Made with extra cushion to protect your hand as well as soften the blows to your opponent.

Should be at least 14-16 ounces especially if you weigh over 130 pounds.

FIGHT GLOVES

Smaller and more compact to deliver more damage to your opponent.

Only recommended for real competition.

CHOOSE QUALITY

PADDING

High Quality Gloves:

- Absorbs energy by compressing and absorbs the shock once the glove strikes the target.
- Is molded foam which is pre-curved and provides the shock-absorbing capabilities.
- Lightweight and requires no break-in period.

Low Quality Gloves

- Heavier materials.
- Less versatile.

LEATHER

High Quality Gloves:

- Durable and resistant to wear and tear.
- 100% premium top-grain leather—especially cowhide and goatskin—is used because of its highly durable nature.

Low Quality Gloves

- Lesser quality leather more susceptible to breaking down.
- Low-quality materials mean gloves need to be replaced sooner.

STITCHING

CARDIO GLOVES

Least amount of padding and will fall apart faster than other gloves.

STITCHING

High Quality Gloves:

Top-notch stitching using nylon-based thread ensures the padding stays where it should.

Low Quality Gloves

Inferior stitching may allow padding to shift and affect glove performance.

LACE-UP OR HOOK LOOP ?

Gloves that lace up provide a more snug and secure fit.

Lace-ups work best if you're with a trainer or a sparring partner who can lace up for you.

A wrap-around, hook & loop closure fits securely into the channeled wrist, making it completely unobtrusive.

A supportive, segmented cuff acts as a second handwrap as it adds stability to the wrist.

A flexible upper wrist hinge allows just the right amount of flexibility.

Professionals prefer lace-up gloves during competition while hook & loops are more suited for training especially with a punching bag.

GUIDELINES FOR BODY WEIGHT AND SIZE OF TRAINING GLOVES RECOMMENDED

120lbs & less = 12oz - 14oz

120lbs - 150lbs = 14oz - 16oz

150lbs - 180lbs = 16oz - 20oz

“BOXERS PREFER TO TRAIN WITH HEAVIER TRAINING GLOVES TO ENHANCE ENDURANCE”

“TWO PAIRS OF MUHAMMAD ALI FIGHT WORN BOXING GLOVES

180lbs & up = 18oz and up

WORN BOXING GLOVES WENT FOR A COMBINED $771,696 IN AN AUCTION LAST 2012."

LIFE EXPECTANCY

Professional boxers replace their gloves after a mere 30 rounds.

The average lifespan of gloves of amateur boxers is 3 years.

With proper care, they can be used much longer.

ALWAYS REMEMBER

Buy gloves based on quality and comfort.

A good pair of boxing gloves will be comfortable and will fit your hand around the wrist and fingers.

Never settle for gloves that tire out your hands or force them to shape in a way that feels awkward.
