

I have a brand-new love-- and it's not a male or a home or a cars and truck. It's an edgy Showtime television suburban satire, "Weeds", in which Mary Louise Parker plays a widowed soccer mama, Nancy Botwin, in an imaginary subdivision of Los Angeles called Agrestic. Nancy battles with the abrupt death of her hubby from a heart attack and struggles how she'll support her household in their upper-class way of life. Not having any discernable task skills, Nancy discovers the lucrative income in being the local next-door neighbor pot dealer.
