Caria Luna Marble is a magnificent tile that has a white backdrop with light grey tones running through it and a tumbled surface giving it a genuine aged appearance. During the Roman era, this antiquated marble was utilised for sculpting. There is little variance and white background with greyish veining. These tiles work well for floors or walls, are appropriate for a range of patterns and designs, and are perfect for modern interior decoration as well as work settings.

These tiles are available in 10mm thickness in varying sizes like:

100*100mm

150*150mm

305*305mm

Available Finishes: Tumbled and Polished

Uses: Bathroom , Floor , Kitchen , Living Room , Wall.

From the tile to the tiled floor or wall

The difference between the tile and the tiled surface is the same as that between a fabric and garment. Suitable, good quality material is required in order to make a garment, but it is not enough. The assistance of a good designer and tailor are also required. Similarly, in order to create a well tiled surface, good quality and well chosen tiles are required but are not enough: an expert designer and a good tile fixer are also required. In the hands of a designer/tiler (many individuals do both jobs), the tiles become like the material in the hands of the tailor/designer: The essential or raw material. When can one safely say that surface has been “well tiled”?

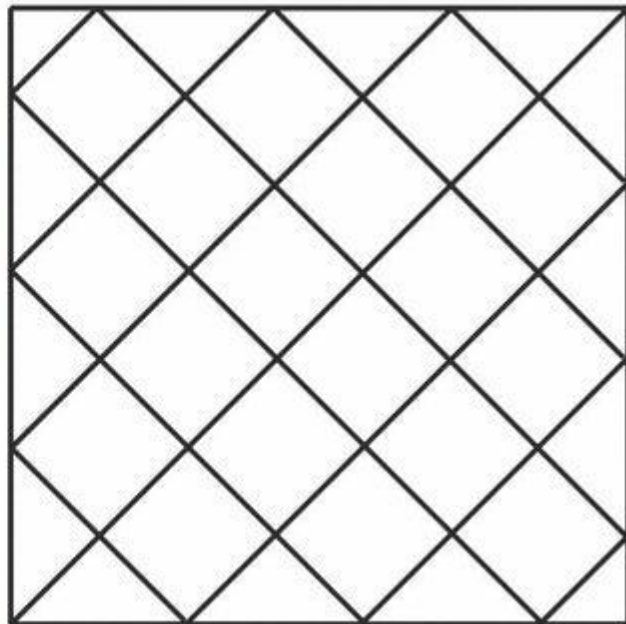

Regular and harmonious: it is flat, with no bumps or hollows, the grouting is straight and regular, with no appreciable difference in level across joints;

Whole: without adhesion failures of the tiles and breakings;

Long lasting: it will perform its aesthetic and functional tasks for a long period without deteriorating under the stress to which it is subject;
