Korigad Fort, also known as Koraigad, stands majestically at an altitude of 923 meters above sea level in the Western Ghats. The fort has a historical lineage dating back to the 15th century when it was built by the Bahmani Sultanate. Over the centuries, Korigad passed through the hands of various rulers, including the Marathas and the British. The architecture of Korigad Fort reflects a blend of strategic military design and utilitarian simplicity. For more, visit the link below:
