

What Do Appellate Judges Consider When Reviewing an Appeal?

What Do Appellate Judges Consider When Reviewing an Appeal?

An appeal is not a retrial; instead, it is a review of the lower court's decision. In fact, it is out of the appellate judge's purview to rehear a case from start to finish. This is one reason why you should hire experienced criminal appeal lawyers, as they'll see whether or not your case is worthy of an appeal.