Tips to Become a Defensive Driver

Defensive driving means safe driving techniques that will help you become a safe and successful driver. If you drive defensively, you will have more control behind wheels. You can easily anticipate what other drivers are going to do. Below are some defensive driving tips that can save your life.

Pay Attention to Your Driving

Staying focused on your driving is one of the most defensive driving strategies. Never use your cell phone and other electronic devices when driving. And driving when feeling sleepy can also be dangerous. It's also essential not to get distracted by what is happening inside your car. And don't multitask when you are driving. If you need to do any activity, take a minute to do so.

Keep Your Eyes on Your Surroundings

Focusing only on your car is not a quality to become a safe driver. Instead, keep your eyes on your surroundings and look for potential hazards. Use the mirrors to keep your eyes out for dangerous situations that are happening behind you.

Don't Expect That Others will Drive Carefully!

It's natural to assume that other drivers will take the same cautions you do when driving. But it may not happen always. When you drive, pay attention to the things you control. Your own driving is the thing that you can control. And you cannot expect to use defensive driving techniques from others.

Predict a Possible Risk

Once you learn to become aware of your surrounding, learn how to predict risk. For example, if you notice a truck carrying construction materials in the back that is not tied down, distance yourself from it. It's because the vehicle can potentially harm other drivers on the road.
