Manufacturing Module in ERP

An enterprise resource planning (ERP) system's manufacturing module is a crucial element that aids businesses in the manufacturing sector in managing and streamlining their operations. This module can be used to track and manage many components of the production process, from raw materials to final goods, and is designed to meet the unique demands and procedures of businesses.