There are other things you can do to help improve your posture so your back does not continue to offer you discomfort. Sit close to the desk when you sit at a desk. Use a footrest like an old telephone directory to change your center of mass and avoid your back from curling into a "C" shape. When you are standing a lot, have a small stool or thick book available so you can rest one leg at a time and take a few of the stress off of your back. Don't lock your knees, and don't jut your chin out. Rocking from heels to toes will also help ease the tiredness in your back.

The software application must keep up and in truth you most likely want one that is fast. I personally desire a computer as fast as possible; at the very same time not compromise quality or information. Put simply, the less time you invest in your computer system filling out all the details of the SOAP Note for that patient, the more time you can need to speak to that client. In business "time = loan" so, if you increased all the time you will conserve by all the patients you have per day, The speed of the Chiropractic Software application is working for you to save you loan. Have a requirement for speed? How does a 15 second SOAP note noise? Is that quickly enough?
