Sealing your black pearl stone:

A sealant will be applied to the surface of the Black Pearl UK to prevent liquids from readily absorbing. As natural granite is porous, sealants are used to protect the stone. Sealing the surface is the first step in keeping it in good condition. It helps to periodically test Black Pearl Granite for leaks to see whether it needs to be resealed. If the slab readily absorbs the water, it must be sealed every six to twelve months. Put a couple of ounces of water on the surface to see if it's "thirsty."

Maintaining Your Black Pearl countertop:

It really comes down to developing a regular cleaning and sealing routine for your natural Black Pearl Granite surface. Once you've got the routine down, it'll be second nature.

- Clean any debris from the surface with a pH-neutral cleaner to keep the sealer from breaking down.
- When your granite surface becomes "thirsty"*, reseal it.
- Using a heavily protected stone polish on a regular basis gradually maintains the sealer on the natural stone's surface.
