

Packing Your Kitchen & Fragile Items for Removals

Undoubtedly, the kitchen is the most used and busiest room in the home – the center of the family. It is the trickiest room in the house when it comes to packing, therefore, to manage everything like the Sydney removals pros do, you need to start packing your kitchen way ahead of the actual moving day and follow these tips:

Sort and Simplify Kitchen Items

Weeks before your moving day, take out everything from the kitchen drawers, cabinets, pantry, and start sorting. There is a good rule of thumb to follow: start by getting rid of items that you have not used in the last 6 months.

Arrange Proper Packing Materials

Arrange packing materials such as boxes, bubble wrap, packing tapes, labels, butchers paper, and permanent markers. These supplies will help protect your fragile belongings from breaking and for labeling your boxes properly.

How to Pack Fragile Items?

Packing fragile kitchenware, the right way is extremely important to prevent breaking during transit. Below are the proper ways to do it:

1. Fragile Plates

Start by packing them standing on their sides like record albums and use foam plates or bubble wrap between them and at the top and bottom to pad them. Also, you can wad up butcher's paper to fill all the gaps. Lastly, mark these cartons as 'fragile' with a marker.

2. Wine Glasses and Bottles

Glassware is easy to pack with the help of this simple trick– Pack each glassware item in a carton and fill the voids in the box with a wadded butcher paper to cushion them.

3. Kitchen Utensils

Grab hold of large plastic zippered bags to pack all your big and small utensils, tape them all together around the plastic for easy packing.

Make sure that you leave yourself enough time for packing all the kitchen items. Rushing as you pack up your kitchen, can cause loads of mistakes, stress, and in turn damage.
