

Most reliable London Hotel Restaurants

Smart, chic and delicate - the best luxury hotels inside london have every opulent amenity guests need, including restaurants. From those established names operated by celebrity chefs to up-and-coming stars which might be just breaking on top of the scene, here is a rundown of the most creative restaurants which luxury hotels working in london have to offer and that make dedicated foodies swoon.

Best for celeb spotting: The Dorchester Hotel, Mayfair

If eye candy is the thing that you're looking for in the restaurant, the existing favourite Dorchester Hotel has already established a recent facelift and it is currently the chicest put in place town.

There are lots of dining options - China Tang could be the popular celebrity hotspot with a 1920s Shanghai flavour. Enjoy incredible Chinese cuisine inside a glam setting within the antiques and classy waitresses. The Grill, meanwhile, has more classic English dishes and is an outstanding area for a Sunday lunch the location where the meat is served up fresh from the whole joint by confident waiters.

For a truly classy setting, however, it's impossible to conquer the signature menu on the Dorchester which is presided over with the famed Alain Ducasse and gives an unparalleled menu and setting that epitomise French chic.

Perfect for fusion: St Martins Lane, Covent Garden

The hip and trendy St Martins Lane is really a blend of funky retro colour and ultra-cool design by Philippe Starck. And when looking at food and drinks, it certainly doesn't disappoint. The Asia De Cuba restaurant can be as buzzy since it is cool - be sure to book a table beforehand or London's cool crowd will fill every one of the spots fast. Although atmosphere is relaxed, a quirky taste suffuses the decor with photographs, crooked lighting and bookshelves, and the meals are an exciting mix of Asian and Latin influences.

Later on, guests move into the mentioned Light Bar the place that the multi-coloured lighting and big projected images are as off-beat because cocktails. For something amazing, you may even order a bespoke creation in the resident mixologists. To get a more energetic evening, hotel guests also can elect to explore the usually members-only nightclub across the street, Bungalow 8.

Perfect for afternoon tea: Claridge's, Mayfair

Claridge's is surely an institution inside London and beyond, and it's an easy task to say why if you are relaxing in the Grand Foyer. Combined with violins, a classic Afternoon Tea here provides a form of elegance and spread that the hotel prides itself on. Encompassed by marble floors and glamorous guests, it is a place which pulls as much grand-aunts as celebrities and is also definitely a hallmark of English traditional dining.

Other options here range from the relaxed Reading Room, which offers contemporary cuisine, and television star Gordon Ramsey's flagship eatery for any formal experience. Ramsey's restaurant can be a bring in itself, because of modern European flavours that happen to be served with a track of exciting creativity.
