What is Disney Plus?

Disney Plus (or Disney+) which was officially launched on November 12th in 2019, is a streaming service and television network that is owned by Disney. There are currently bundles that connect the platform with other Disney-owned (or at the very least owned by Disney) services such as ESPN+ as well as Hulu. Streamers can find an abundance of Disney, Pixar, Marvel, Star Wars, and even National Geographic content stretching across years of television and theatrical releases.
Disney+ can be described as a more user-friendly and richly contented successor to the previously-operated Disney Now service which offered various Disney shows (mostly targeted at the children) that required television subscription for the majority of its programming.
