Description:

Even if the leather backing of a sheepskin rug dries and cracks (for example, when repeated pet urine or liquids were left to dry on the rug – dry rot sets in and tears start), we will check to see if holes can be repaired by creating new foundation and fiber, or invisible patching.

Our team of specialists work through a detailed process that was created to ensure every rug gets the treatments it needs, according to its state, material and so on. We inspect, recommend, and then deliver, each and every time.

The natural oils in sheepskin can grab dirt and even smell on their own, let alone holding on to pet odors and marks. These are just some of the reasons why you need a professional rug cleaning and repair company to protect your rug's beauty and style, as well as its value.

We inspect every sheepskin rug that is brought to us in order to give you the fairest evaluation of its damage, and what restoration is possible. Once we begin restoring your rug, we will do our best to refresh its look and color, take away any odors and give a final return of its volume with special brushing. It is all done using only natural, non toxic cleaning products, so you can rest assured your rug will not be damaged by harsh chemicals.
