Blogging has become increasingly popular over the past few years due to the fact that it is much easier than making a normal website. Blogs are great for people who just want to make money with little cost as they are easy to build and have the ability to obtain decent rankings in a shorter space of time than normal websites. Below I will briefly touch on some SEO techniques which can be used to help increase the link popularity and ranking of a blog.

The first aspect is content. Having a good amount of unique and targeted content on your blog is always very important and is just as important for blogs as it is for websites, so be sure to have as much content as possible. There are loads of content generator software programs which allow you to make different unique versions of an original article which can help save time.

The second aspect is building quality backlinks. Try to exchange links with people who have websites or blogs in the same niche as you. Alternatively another good option is to try and purchase links on blogs or websites related to your niche which have a great number of backlinks and high page rank as this help your rankings. You can also make use of submitting your blog feeds to blog directories which will notify them to publish your content on their blogs which can bring you more visitors.

The third important aspect is blog pinging. It is essential that every time you write a new post for your blog or simply update old content that you utilise a service to ping your blog. There are many places like pingoat, pingomatic etc. What this does is it notify blog directories and other popular bookmarking sites that they need to crawl your site for your any newly posted content. This will ultimately get more pages indexed in the search engines quickly and will hopefully result in a bit more traffic too.

I trust these few tips helped you in optimising your newly made blogs.
