As people age, their needs related to health tend to become more complex with the increased likelihood of having one or many chronic diseases. Health services mostly are designed to cure acute symptoms or conditions.

Our health system services transform timely to ensure affordable and possible access to evidence-based medical interventions that respond to the needs of older people and can help avoid care dependency in later ages of life.

Staying at home makes them feel that they are being surrounded by the known and familiar that helps to create a sense of freedom and security.
