

What are the best online resources for learning photography?

1. Digital Photography College

The School of Digital Photography is one of the first websites to actually do photography courses. You can spend most of your time completing the "Tips and Tutorials" section. They will guide you through "post-production" and tell you about the equipment.

Strobist

Strobist is easily one of my favorite photography ideas. Their "On Assignment" works are an excellent repository of information. This part alone will teach you how to solve almost any problem. Strobist will even participate in their "Lighting 101/102" tutorial.

3. District news for photographers

PDN is a magazine I found when I was in college. Some other websites provided by PDN do not really look forward to the field of professional photography. They have tutorials, equipment reviews and news, and the photography is absolutely top notch.

4. Shutterbug

Shutterbug is another good magazine, which has been well translated into the Internet. They provide commentary, technology, image technology, photography columns and photojournalism. Their gallery section has some cool photos that can make your thoughts pop up.

5. Pop photography

Popular photography has been around for a long time, and the good stuff in magazines is more active on the Internet. There are a lot of great tips in their "how to" section. Popular photography shines especially when you are looking for equipment reviews.

6. KelbyOne

KelbyOne is an online tutorial site with a large number of video tutorials. It's about $20 a month, but it's worth every penny. Courses include Photoshop, Lightroom, photography, design, video, business, inspiration and software. Each section has detailed quality videos on the subject and is hosted by some of the best creators in the world.
