The values of residential property, land or commercial property for a certain location are listed in the Ready Reckoner on Economic, which is issued and governed by the state government in question. These prices are frequently adjusted yearly based on how the public views the government's pricing adjustments. As a result, a homeowner or buyer would have to pay the stamp duty or registration amount, which must be less than the ready reckoner rates mentioned or the actual price of the property, whichever is larger.
