

About Iman Sandifer

Iman Sandifer is an educator & academic researcher based out of South Florida. Iman is working on the recruitment, retention & support of male educators of color, particularly highlighting black male teachers.

Iman Sandifer grew up in Hallandale Beach. Iman became inspired to help young people reach their full potential because of the adults who helped when no one else would.

Throughout his tenure in college, he served in numerous educational capacities including as a teaching intern with the Breakthrough Miami Summer Enrichment program and the Head Royce School Heads Up program in Oakland, California. With his childhood experiences in mind, Iman formed Manhood On The Go, first as a personal initiative in 2014 and now as a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization. The Manhood On The Go Foundation was created to flatten life's learning curve for future generations by providing help wherever is needed. Professionally, Iman is currently a middle school Social Studies teacher in Broward County

Public Schools as well as an Impact Leader with Profound Gentlemen. Previously, he served as an Associate Site Director for Breakthrough Miami & District Legislative Aide to Florida State Senator Annette Taddeo in Miami, Florida.
