MyCarNeedsA.com signs the UK deal with RoadHow

The online car servicing and maintenance comparison site MyCarNeedsA.com has announced a major partnership today with the new driving app and platform RoadHow. The RoadHow driver risk management app helps learner drivers to pass their test and insurance providers to digitally access a motorist's driving ability for the first time, encouraging drivers to work in the app to help them to become safer and more aware on the road and to potentially save money on their insurance by using the data gleaned from the testing of their driving knowledge when pricing the driver's policy.

MyCarNeedsA.com is an online comparison service that brings together a network of approved garages and motoring service providers to provide customers with an easy and convenient source for MOT, Servicing, and maintenance quotes; it guarantees transparency, integrity, and quality by using customer feedback to rate and compare each service provider's work.

MyCarNeedsA.com has a wide network of trusted and approved service providers and garages available across the UK, which are all assessed and continually evaluated both by the company and the day-to-day scrutiny of its customers.

Announcing the partnership, Scott Hamilton, CEO of MyCarNeedsA.com said, "Despite the obvious difficulties over the last year we have worked really hard to ensure we continue to improve our customer offering and work with new partners who share our aspirations to make car ownership as easy, convenient and cost-effective as possible".

"The motoring service industry is really starting to sit up and take notice of how businesses can work in collaboration to provide improved products and services to customers whilst developing the commercial opportunities they present. We are really delighted to be able to extend our MOT reminder and quote service to RoadHow and help their customers save time, money, and hassle."

Adrian Ryan, CEO of RoadHow said, "This partnership means we can provide our customers with a one-stop source for their automotive needs. Quality and trust are a key part of the offer and this ensures our customers are provided with a trusted solutions for their service, maintenance, and repair needs. We believe this is imperative in today's ever-changing digital landscape.

“RoadHow exists to improve driver and biker knowledge and awareness so that they are safer when out on the road. MyCarNeedsA.com differentiates itself in the price comparison market through its focus on quality and customer service, which leads to safer vehicles on the road. This has resulted in many customers choosing a service provider based on factors they value more than just the lowest price, such as convenience and overall service levels. This fits extremely well with our own core values of safety, service, and quality.”
