STEPS TO TAKE TO FILE A WORKERS' COMPENSATION CLAIM

01 Report your injury to your employer

If you've been injured on the job, it's important that your employer be notified as soon as possible. You have 21 days from the date of your injury to report it, don't wait. But benefits begin from the date you report the injury, not the date it occurred.

02 Seek medical attention

Your employer may have a list of approved workers' compensation physicians or medical offices they require you to see for an evaluation. If so, you must see one of the approved doctors for the first 90 days after your injury.

03 Document your injury and recovery

Detailed notes can help prove your claim should it come into question. Were there witnesses to your injury? Was there a piece of malfunctioning equipment? Write down as much as possible so you have the correct information for your claim.

When to Contact an Attorney

Consult an attorney if:

- Your employer refuses to submit your injury report to their insurance company.

- Your workers' comp claim is denied.
- Your employer retaliates by cutting hours, adding an additional workload, or creating a hostile work environment.
- You are fired.

You have rights to make sure that an injury is properly compensated for; don't let it go ignored or unaddressed!
Contact a reputable workers' comp law firm to understand your rights as an injured employee.
