

Understanding The United States' Deportation Process And Timeline

Numerous individuals encounter deportation proceedings in the United States annually. The deportation process is intricate and time-consuming, often stretching over several years. Generally, an individual cannot be expelled without first appearing before an immigration judge.

It may be challenging for many to comprehend that it can take several years, or even decades, for a non-citizen to be removed and deported from the US. This is primarily due to the extensive backlog of immigration courts and the zealous and competent representation of attorneys fighting against removal.

However, the duration of the deportation proceedings varies depending on the immigrant's country of origin and whether the necessary documentation is available for ICE to obtain a country's consent for the issuance of the final removal order. Some immigrants, particularly those from Mexico, can be swiftly removed.

They can be expelled within one to two weeks after the final removal order is issued. Conversely, immigrants from certain countries may never be deported by ICE. These countries refuse to accept individuals being removed from the US, and ICE cannot acquire the required documentation.

The outcome of deportation proceedings, whether expedited or protracted, can significantly impact one's life. Therefore, it is always advisable to have experienced and professional immigration lawyers by your side during the deportation proceedings.

If you or someone you know is under investigation or facing removal, several steps occur before a final decision is reached. You can also contest your removal in a court of law. If you are in deportation proceedings in the US, do not give up. Immigration law can be intricate and challenging to comprehend.

However, by hiring an experienced immigration lawyer, you can understand how to advocate for your right to remain in the US. At Gehi and Associates, our immigration lawyers have expertise and experience in this field, and we are here to assist you. We will vigorously fight your deportation case.

Read full article here; <https://gehilaw.com/understanding-the-united-states-deportation-process-and-timeline/>