

SAM SAND DUNES DESERT SAFARI CAMPS JAISALMER

Jaisalmer Camel Safaris Are a Great Way of Doing Something New. Among the most popular hills is Sam, 40km west of Jaisalmer, which is constantly packed at night and are to a greater extent a jamboree than a back-to-nature experience. Bouncing on a camel is the most reminiscent and fun approach to test Thar Desert life.

You won't discover overwhelming sand ridges here; particularly with Sam Sand Dunes Jaisalmer Resort. You will discover land sprinkled with intermittent bushes, fields of millet, little towns, and kids grouping rushes of sheep or goats through them.

The individuals who like to appreciate the desert scene in harmony and calm may make a beeline for the rises close to Khuri town. These are lesser-known yet most shocking sand ridges around Jaisalmer. While riding a camel here, you can encounter the rural desert life very close, as the town is home to mud and straw hovels and the town people lean toward living the conventional way.

The best time is from September to March during the cooler dry months,. After March, the desert turns out to be unendurably hot, and afterward, the storm season begins. The downpours are very little, however, and temperatures stay high. Camel safaris for the most part leave promptly toward the beginning of the day to permit some distance to be covered, and an appropriate outdoor spot to be found and set up, before sunset.

Riding on camelback through the moving sand ridges of the Thar Desert is an encounter like no other. Additionally, around 40 kilometers (24.8 miles) west of Jaisalmer lies another best district — the Sam Sand Dunes, which are portrayed by tall sandhills (around 30-60 meters) and basically no vegetation. This is the most mainstream place for safari, which makes it the most swarmed also. Regardless, the camel safari here is entertaining! You can land at different focuses en route and camp through the astounding hills.

We need to bring something agreeable and cushioned to sit on to make the excursion less agonizing in case you're going on a more drawn-out safari. Other helpful things to bring incorporate sunscreen, shades, a cap, tissue, electric lamp, bug repellent, water container, toothbrush and toothpaste, hiking bed liner and a lot of comfortable dress as it can get cold in the desert around evening time. Do know that you will not have the option to wash in the desert, so moist disposable clothes will prove to be useful also.
