

Remote Work Tool

Remote working is the need of the hour in this pandemic age. But, this method is not free of challenges. A recent report from the United Nations International Labor Organization has revealed that though employees are more productive during remote working, they are more vulnerable to working for more time, interference between work and home, and even more stress. A remote work tool is helpful in addressing these challenges. But, it is necessary to understand the impact of these challenges to overcome them more effectively.
