In this explosive interview, Spiro Skouras is joined by Dr. Sherri Tenpenny. The two discuss the latest developments regarding the coronavirus situation which was declared a global health pandemic, by the Gates funded World Health Organization, as more information comes to light questioning the need for a global lockdown.

Dr. Tenpenny and Spiro examine and explore, the motives of the global response by governments, global institutions and private interests, as Dr. Tenpenny exposes perhaps the most alarming aspect of the crisis yet!

No, it is not the virus, it is the blank check issued to the vaccine and drug manufacturers, which not only provides unlimited funding, but also provides blanket immunity to Big Pharma for any harm attributed with the treatments produced during the declared emergency, including all drugs and vaccines.

THESE LEADING EXPERTS RISK BEING CENSORED, SHUT DOWN, AND CANCELLED TO MAKE SURE YOU ARE ARMED WITH THE TRUTH

THIS 9-PART DOCUMENTARY SERIES INCLUDES WELL-
CREDENTIALLED DOCTORS, SCIENTISTS, RESEARCHERS,
LEGAL EXPERTS AND CHAMPIONS.

Robert F Kennedy Jr.

Attorney

“The global public health cartels are silencing freedom of speech and putting the people in fear so that they can control them.”

Del Bigtree

Activist

If you control how immune systems work, then you have control of the human being. Then you have a worldwide enforceable police movement to take away your rights to control your own body.”

Dr. Zach Bush

Triple board-certified MD

“We can predict very well that this, (COVID-19) is going to be gone in 2 years. (Like other SARS outbreaks) And so, we don’t need to clamber for a vaccine because by the time we even find an effective vaccine, we will have come into balance with this virus.

Colton Hall

PharmD.

“If you want to sell a product somehow you need to give people a reason to buy it. If you tell everybody that everybody is sick and you sell a whole lot of fear. And then you say ‘Don’t worry we’ll come and give you the answer.’ then of course people are going to buy it.”

John Stockton

NBA Hall Of Fame

One of the things that sticks in my head is losing someone like Steph Curry to basketball would be a crime. I just think what a disappointment to this world it would be if that guy didn't become who he is. So I wonder who we are missing out on right now."

Dr. Christiane Northrup

Women's Health Advocate

“We are now vaccinating pregnant women, but we are telling them they need to be careful of the mercury in fish”

Dr. Ben Tapper

Chiropractor

“If I had spoken these words last year it would've fallen on deaf ears. The reason that my voice went all over the world is because truth is treason in an empire of lies; and in a time of treason truth is a revolutionary act”

Dr. Rashid Buttar

Emergency Medicine Specialist

“I don't think it's about power and money. I think If it's about anything, it's dumbing the population down and hurting people. It's more sinister than just power and money.”

Dr. Andrew Kaufman

Psychiatrist

“They didn’t have a virus that they pulled RNA out of. They put it into a computer and let it fill in the gaps with just random sequences from other viruses or other sources. They basically made it up”

Brian Hooker

Biologist Researcher

"I used to follow the Coronavirus data. I stopped doing that because the quality of the data is so poor I feel like we are shooting arrows into the dark"

Andrew Wakefield

Former Physician/Activist

“What we are seeing in the news in the U.K now is a new Coronavirus more contagious and infectious than the original strain. Why?

Mary Holland JD

Attorney

I learned about vaccine injury from my child's experience of it. I was aware that vaccine injury was possible – 1 in a million, or so I thought. When my child suffered - my appreciation of vaccine injury risk changed fundamentally.”

James Lyons-Weiler

Sr. Research Scientist

“They have politicized this so that we can't even have a conversation about public health without it becoming a political conversation. And we can undo this”

Tom O'Bryan

Functional Medicine

“Social distancing creates stress hormones and they weaken and demand your immune system to respond to the stress. Eventually you start wearing out your immune system. Then it's not able to do its job when you're exposed to something like a virus.”

If you feel like you haven't been exposed to enough stupidity today and would like to remedy that, the New York Times is here to deliver.

"Big pharma is fooling us," reads the New York Times headline. "Heroic work went into the development of the coronavirus vaccines. But that doesn't mean this industry deserves your affection." The essay is by Stephen Buranyi, and it contains some absolute gems:

The turpitude of the pharmaceutical industry is so commonplace that it has become part of the cultural wallpaper. The screenwriters of the 1993 movie "The Fugitive" knew they could find a perfectly plausible villain to menace Harrison Ford in a faceless drug company out to cover up its malfeasance. (The film was a hit.) In John le Carré's 2001 novel "The Constant Gardener," [sic] a British diplomat uncovering a pharma giant testing dangerous drugs on poor Africans is similarly easily to swallow: Its plotline echoes a real case involving Pfizer in Nigeria. (The company has denied any wrongdoing and settled out of court the suit brought by the families of children who died during the testing.)

And yet, since the pharmaceutical industry stepped in with the vaccines, generations worth of ill will appears to be melting away. Last year, Gallup polling had the pharmaceutical industry ranked the most disliked in America, below both big oil and big government. By this September — even before the vaccines arrived — the industry’s approval rating was already improving.

So, the worry here is that people may be responding more strongly to a real-world vaccine against a real-world plague than they are to . . . fictitious events in movies and novels.

Okey-dokey.

<iframe src="//content.jwplatform.com/players/PYrL9S3R-mFslriqe.html" width="640" height="360" frameborder="0" scrolling="auto"></iframe>

<https://www.nationalreview.com/corner/exceptional-asininity/?jwsourc=cl>

Amitabh Chandra of the Harvard Business School raises one obvious multiple-choice question in response: “Let’s think about the argument in this article: A virus causes over $16 trillion to damage to the U.S., through lost lives and lost economic activity. The government pays $10 billion and we get two vaccines with 95 percent effectiveness in nine months. This was: 1.) a really good deal; 2.) a handout to big pharma.”

The issue of “affection” raised in the headline is interesting. One of the things that is genuinely great — and, ultimately, humane — about the free-market system is that it doesn’t matter very much how buyers and sellers feel about one another. If I need to fill up the car and the price is right, does it really matter if I feel any “affection” for 7-Eleven, or do I just give them the money and get my gasoline and go? (I do feel some affection for 7-Eleven, a former employer of mine, many years ago. I also kind of hate 7-Eleven, because they are a very bad neighbor.) Even the companies people tend to have affectionate feelings about — Apple, Porsche, Armani, whatever — mostly work for money, not love. That’s how it should be. Adam Smith had that one right.

We need not be under any illusions about the pharmaceutical business to believe, as many of us do, that Pfizer et al. are much more likely to be of some use in an epidemic than are op-ed moralists at the New York Times.
