On the day of the game, 1,500 spectators will receive T-shirts to commemorate the postseason, and 300 fans who prepare the cheer pool will receive limited-edition sports cards on a first-come, first-served basis, and the entire home stadium will be colored yellow by providing cheering flags to all spectators.

Prior to the start of the game, fans selected by open recruitment hope for victory, and a special event "KB Six o'clock Bank Full Court Putting Challenge" will be held at halftime. If you succeed in putting from the court end line to the other end line hole, you can win 1 million won in prize money.

Outside the stadium, you can experience the trophy in person and take commemorative photos at the regular league trophy photo zone prepared for fans who have been on the past journey, and various participatory events will also be held by game booths such as the Combine (Wingspan/Sargent Jump Measurement) experience.

Meanwhile, Kang Yi-seul (180cm, F), who is working as a WKBL Ambassador this season, said he prepared 300 cups of coffee for home fans by adding all the mission success prize money offered by the federation and asked them to support him for his third integrated victory.

An official from KB Stars said, "We will bring joy to fans with various events in commemoration of the postseason in two years," and asked for intuition, "Please come to the stadium and cheer for the first step toward the unified championship." Other details such as how to participate in the event can be found on the club's official SNS.
