Boca Juniors vs Estudiantes is one of the biggest rivalries in Argentinian football. The two sides have faced off dozens of times, with their matches often carrying significant implications in the league table and continental tournaments.

Boca Juniors, known as "Boca," is one of the most decorated clubs in South America with a massive fanbase across Argentina and abroad. Founded in 1905 in Buenos Aires' docklands, Boca has won a total of 70 domestic trophies and international tournaments. They play their home games at the iconic La Bombonera stadium.

Estudiantes de La Plata, simply called "Estudiantes," was established in 1905 in the city of La Plata. While smaller than Boca, Estudiantes has still achieved great success, most notably winning four Copa Libertadores titles. Their home ground is the Estadio Jorge Luis Hirschi.

The first Superclasico match between Boca and Estudiantes took place in 1910. Since then, they have faced off almost 100 times in the Argentine Primera División alone. Living up to their fierce rivalry, many of these games have been intensely competitive with strong tackles and emotions running high🔥.

Some of the most famous Boca vs Estudiantes matches include the 1968 Nacional final won by Estudiantes 1-0. They also contested the epic 1981 Metropolitano playoff decider, with Boca winning on penalties after a 2-2 draw⚽. More recently, their 2017 Copa Argentina semifinal went to penalties before Boca advanced to the final🏆.

While neither club dominates the other historically, every meeting feels like a cup final. The support from passionate fans in La Bombonera and Estadio Jorge Luis Hirschi creates an electric atmosphere六欄六.
