The fact is, as far as building wealth, chosing a great opportunity, though important, actually plays not a huge part in succeeding no matter how great the mlm company.

The problem is that the strategies given for recruiting always only involves writing down a list of friends,relatives, business associates, and so forth.

This practice although is a good method for starting it is far too limited for success long term.

Most commonly, newbies are trained to grab their phone book and come up with a list of at least 100 or more people they know. We are instructed to include family, neighbors, professional contacts and on and on.

However, most often, the experience most people get from the warm market list approach is that it rarely works out over time for most people. That is if it is the only ACN recruiting method being used.

The reason being is that you reach the end of such a list eventually and there is no one else to talk to. Along with that fact, many of those that do sign up among family and friends will often quit working the business before any real measure of success.

For this reason the family and friends mlm recruiting process actually works for less than 5% of the people who venture into network marketing. The warm market is simply too limited to be your primary ACN leads source.
