What is it about catamarans that make them so well-liked?

In the past five years, catamaran use has skyrocketed. Catamarans have several benefits over monohulls. Lagoon 420 Catamaran Sailing Yacht

- A catamaran offers significantly more room.
- Unlike monohulls, catamarans do not heel while sailing and barely rock at anchor. This will make the boat a lot more pleasant to spend time in.
- As a result of their low draught, catamarans may travel in water that is not as deep as other types of boats. Most lagoons in the South Pacific only go up to a depth of 6 or 8 feet. These lagoons are inaccessible to monohulls, but a catamaran can navigate them with ease.
- Catamarans are typically faster than monohulls, particularly downwind.
- Brighten up the family room with more windows. Unlike on a monohull, where the living quarters are located below deck in the dark and closed-in hull, in a catamaran they are up on the bridge deck in the boat's centre.
- More storage space and room for supplementary systems like air conditioning, water makers, generators, larger fridges and freezers, etc... As before, having ample space for all of these conveniences improves quality of life.
