

NON SDS Colleges In Canada | Skylark

Explore the diversity of Canadian education on Skylark Infobase's blog, distinguishing between SDS (Study Direct Stream) and non-SDS colleges in Canada. Gain a comprehensive understanding of the unique features and advantages offered by non-SDS colleges, providing valuable insights for international students seeking a range of options in their Canadian academic journey.

Canada is one of the most popular and preferred countries that students who are interested in pursuing higher education choices. However, applying for colleges in foreign countries like Canada may end up being a lengthy and devastating process.

You would have to look for colleges, apply for visas and whatnot to study abroad. When applying for a visa, one of the most confusing moments that arise is understanding what SDS (Student Direct Stream previously known as SPP meaning Student Partner Program) and non-SDS (referred to as the General Category) actually are.

These are uncommon terms, but hold great importance to the visa application. So, before you proceed with the visa, it is important for you to understand the key difference between SDS and non-SDS.

FOR MORE CLICK HERE TO CONTACT US.

