

Boygenius' debut album tour features a stellar lineup onstage

Boygenius, a supergroup that consists of Lucy Dacus, Phoebe Bridgers, and Julien Baker, is touring North America to support their much awaited debut album, The Record.

From June through August, the band will be touring with a group of exceptional musicians that includes Carly Rae Jepsen, Barteaux Strange, Claud, Broken Social Scene, and Illuminati Hotties. The tour's dates are the same as those that were previously made public as part of the Re:Set music festival.

The trio's tour starts in June after performances at Coachella and another one-off event in California in April. Fans across North America will be able to hear Boygenius' distinctive style, a fusion of indie rock, folk, and Americana. The tour will be enjoyable for both die-hard fans of the band's music and those who are just discovering it.

Boygenius has gained popularity ever since their self-titled debut EP was released in 2018 and received praise for its heartfelt lyrics and hauntingly beautiful tunes. Each band member has had a successful solo career; most recently, well-liked albums have been released by Bridgers, Dacus, and Baker.

They have never collaborated on a full-length project before, and since The Record's announcement earlier this year, curiosity in it has been steadily rising.

Four songs from the album have been released, including the brooding and reflective ballad "True Blue," which showcases the group's vocal harmonies and songwriting prowess. "Emily

I'm Sorry," which has Bridgers singing lead and the trio's unusual harmonies lending the song's lyrics depth and passion, is another great track.
