Let us scroll down the listicle and know the top 5 films from Bollywood that have defined Pyaar Dosti hai in the best possible way.

Kuch Kuch Hota Hai

“Tum nahi samjhogi Anjali, Kuch Kuch Hota Hai.” The 90s was all about being friends with someone and then falling in love with them. This love triangle between close friends was the starter pack of finding love in friendship.

Jaane Tu... Ya Jaane Na

Best friends who can give each other life did not even understand that they were always in love with each other and this is Jaane Tu... Ya Jaane Na for you. This was the kind of friendship where all the other people understood their love but them. The drama-filled ending proposal was the best scene in the film, and each one of us secretly wants a marriage proposal like that.

Yeh Jawaani Hai Deewani

A set of 3 friends, met Naina (Deepika Padukone) on a trip to Manali and even after so many things happening Bunny (Ranbir Kapoor) did not understand the love that the female protagonist had for him. Later, after he is back from the big project he got, they met again, and the friends were in love, and the relationship started after leaps and turns.

Kal Ho Na Ho

A love triangle again! An amazing movie that has friends and a love triangle. We are sure this is one of your favourite Bollywood movies if you are a fan of King Khan. Do you remember “6 din ladki in?” A bit cliché but an amazing way to define that love starts with friendship.

Mujhse Dosti Karoge!

One friend's emotional sacrifices for the other, and then vice versa is sure a scene of 'Sisters before misters'. Later, the boy and girl get the right partner for each other, and we could finally scream, “pyar tu dosti ka hi naam hai!”

mujhse
dosti
karoge!
