

30+ Names That Mean Eclipse: Unique and Beautiful Options for Your Bab

The Hindu culture is filled with fascinating myths and legends that have been passed down through generations. One such myth revolves around solar and lunar eclipses, which are said to be caused by a demon known as Svarbhanu. According to this myth, Svarbhanu is constantly on the hunt for the sun and moon, and when he catches them, he engulfs them in his mouth, causing an eclipse. In Sanskrit, the word “svar” means sun and “bhanu” means light. Therefore, Svarbhanu can be translated to mean “light of the sun” or “sunlight”. This name perfectly represents the demon’s obsession with the sun and his ability to swallow its light during an eclipse. Another name associated with Svarbhanu is Rahu. In Hinduism, Rahu is one of the nine celestial bodies known as Navagrahas, which play a significant role in astrological beliefs. Rahu is often depicted as a serpent or dragon-like creature who causes eclipses by swallowing the sun and moon. The word “Rahu” comes from the Sanskrit word “raha”, which means to seize or snatch away. This name highlights the demon’s destructive nature and his ability to snatch away the sunlight during an eclipse. In some versions of the myth, Svarbhanu is also known as Ketu. Ketu is another Navagraha and is believed to be the tail of the demon Rahu. In Hindu mythology, Rahu and Ketu are considered as two halves of the same entity, where Rahu represents the head and Ketu represents the tail. The word “ketu” is derived from the Sanskrit word “keta”, which means banner or flag. Just like a flag flutters and signals danger, Ketu’s presence during an eclipse forewarns of the coming darkness caused by Svarbhanu. The Hindu culture also has many other names for solar and lunar eclipses, which are often associated with the myth of Svarbhanu. For instance, the Sanskrit word “grahana” means to seize or grasp, which perfectly describes the demon’s actions during an eclipse.
