

Buying Guide and Ethnic Tips for Men's Ethnic Wear

The festival season has begun with Rathyatra. And when we think of festivals, we immediately think of our cultures and traditions. So now is the time for all men and women to show off their ethnic looks. Women have always had an advantage in terms of ethnic clothing options because there are so many, whereas men have very few. Why should ethnic wear for men lag behind as fashion trends evolve around the world?

Here we will present a simple guide to assisting you in purchasing your desired ethnic clothing as well as styling tips for wearing them correctly.

Kurta Pajama

If you are not familiar with ethnic clothing or do not wear it frequently, you should begin with a set of Kurta Pajama. A kurta over cotton vest is a long tunic-style garment with an open neckline. Mandarin collars are also available in some new designs. The pajama is a trouser that goes with the Kurta. Choose a kurta made of soft fabrics such as silk, cotton, or linen. If you enjoy artwork and prefer a more vibrant appearance, choose pieces with beautiful designs, embroideries, or prints. Kurtas are also an excellent choice for formal wear. The formal kurtas are typically made of cotton or linen, in solid colors with no designs. Colors such as black, blue, and beige are ideal for formal occasions.

Sherwani

If you like ethnic clothing, you must have one or two sherwanis carefully tucked away in your closet. This mandarin collar overcoat is today's most popular wedding attire. It is appropriate not only for the groom but also for his male friends and family. Its popularity stems primarily from its exquisite design and breathtaking artworks.

Sherwanis for men look best when worn with Kurta Pajama. They can be worn with jootis or mojris as footwear. Keep the accessories simple with light pieces of jewelry, as the Sherwanis already have elaborate designs.

A kurta, on the other hand, can be worn with a pair of trousers, chinos, or even a Dhoti. For a more casual look, pair your kurta with a pair of denims. Short kurtas are also very popular these days. They are the best option for regular college attire for children.

Wear your Kurta pajama or Sherwani with a Nehru Jacket to amp up your look. Nehru jackets are a type of contemporary ethnic wear. The Desi look created by stylish Nehru Jackets will set you apart from the crowd. Bandhgala Jackets are Nehru Jackets with full sleeves. These jackets are a true work of art. If you are willing to spend money on a Nehru/jacket, always buy it from reputable brands or have it custom-made from designer boutiques.
