What is the 67 Points System for Immigration to Canada?

Every candidate for the Federal Skilled Workers Program is evaluated by the IRCC using the 67-Point System for Canada Immigration to determine their eligibility. The federal government only accepts applicants who receive at least 67 points on the Canada 67 points calculator. A candidate may receive up to 100 points overall under this system. A candidate's application will be turned down if they receive less than 67 points.

How to Calculate 67 Points for Canada Immigration in 2023?

Tens of thousands of immigrants are hoping for migrating to Canada. To make relocation more advantageous for persons who want to settle down in this stunning country, IRCC continuously updates its immigration laws and procedures. Federal Skilled Workers Program, Federal Skilled Trades Program, and the Canadian Experience Class are the three main categories into which immigrants applying through Express Entry will fall. The 67 Points Immigration Canada method is used to streamline the process of obtaining Canada PR for Federal Skilled Workers. Let us walk you through the fundamentals of this system and how you can strive for the highest possible marks.

Federal Skilled Worker Program: Six Selection Criteria

The immigration authorities have established six criteria for the Federal Skilled Worker Program, which are used to evaluate applications and assign points. Here is a quick description of each of those elements.

- 1. Language Proficiency (up to 28 points): French and English are both recognized as official languages in Canada. If an immigrant intends to stay in this country, they should be fluent in one or both of these languages. He or she must be able to read, write, speak, and comprehend these languages. There are approved tests to evaluate the applicant's language proficiency. Candidates can receive up to 28 points in this factor, depending on their score.
- 2. Education (maximum 25 points): A candidate will receive points for each degree, certification, diploma, or other kind of higher education that he or she possesses. If you received a degree from a foreign university, you must present legitimate documentation; if you received a degree from a Canadian university, you must present an Educational Credential Assessment report. Candidates with a master's or doctorate will score higher in this category.
- 3. Work experience (15 points maximum): For federal skilled workers, work experience is very important. Getting a Canada permanent residence is simpler if you have worked at least 30 hours a week for a full year in a full-time position that is related to your talents. Here, the IRCC will take into account both your job abroad and in Canada. If you worked while you were a student in Canada, you can be awarded bonus points. Six or more years of experience will get the candidate 15 points.
- 4. Age (maximum 12 points): If you wish to get over the 67-point Immigration Canada criterion, your age is a key consideration. Each applicant who is over 18 and wants to be considered for the Federal Skilled Worker program will receive points based on their age. The age group of 18 to 35 will receive the highest number of points. The candidate will receive fewer and fewer points in this category as his or her age rises.
- 5. Pre-arranged employment in Canada (maximum 10 points): Obtaining a permanent job offer from a Canadian employer is strongly advised for anyone looking to apply for a permanent residence visa in Canada. The 67 points calculator will award you up to 10 points if you have an appointment letter from a Canadian employer. It should be a full-time position offered for at least a year. A legitimate employment offer should be based on the training or professional experience you have.
- 6. Adaptability (maximum 10 points): In addition to the five characteristics listed above, candidates can also meet the 67 Points for Canada Immigration requirement by using the CRS score of their spouse or common-law partner. Your partner may receive an additional 5 points if they demonstrate greater language proficiency. A Canadian university degree and job experience can get you or your partner 5 points. A blood relative living in Canada may raise your score by up to 5 points. The relative category includes your or your partner's parents, grandparents, siblings, children, or grandchildren who are already Canadian citizens.

What distinguishes the Comprehensive Ranking System (CRS) score from the 67-Point Calculator value?

The Comprehensive Ranking System \(CRS\) score tool uses a 1200-point grid of applicants in the Express Entry Pool as opposed to the 67-point Calculator's 100-point grid for selection under the Express Entry Program. Additionally, the Canada Immigration point calculator and the CRS point calculator are utilized as references when figuring up the points for Federal Skilled Workers and the CRS, respectively.

Because they are hard-coded software, not all Canada Immigration calculators will give you reliable results. Therefore, it is usually better to use an immigration consultant's assistance to determine your CRS score.
