You will certainly want to get your popcorn ready beforehand and be sure you are sitting in a comfortable spot on the couch before this game starts on Sunday. The Cowboys will take the football field as three point favorites over the Giants, but there is a reason why they play the games. You never know what's going to happen!

The jury is still out on just how well either of these teams will be during this upcoming season. All eyes are always on the Dallas Cowboys, but they have many skeptics. Not a lot of people have a ton of faith in QB Tony Romo and the team hasn't done a lot to improve their roster in the offseason. However, WR Dez Bryant looks poised for his best season ever and new defensive Coordinator Monte Kiffin should have the Cowboys' defense playing better than they have in years.

The New York Giants haven't done a whole lot to improve their roster in the offseason either. However, they still have Tom Coughlin calling the shots and Eli Manning taking the snaps under center. Due to that fact, nobody is willing to count them out of Super Bowl contention just yet.

If we were putting money on this football game, we would put it on the New York Giants. The Cowboys may win, but if we have learned anything throughout the years, it's never to put money on the Cowboys!
