

Wedding Band vs Engagement Ring: Do You Need Both?

If your partner surprised you with the perfect engagement ring, you might be wondering if you really need to add Men's Wedding Rings Burlington to the mix. After all, if you love your engagement ring, why not wear it alone after saying "I do?"

The solution? It's completely your call! Whether you opt to wear both rings stacked or keep it simple with one, here's what you should know.

Do You Require Both an Engagement Ring and a Wedding Band?

It's all about personal preference. If you're a traditionalist, a wedding band and engagement ring are a classic, sophisticated combination.

From sleek metal bands to diamond-studded eternity rings, wearing both rings together is a beautiful way to symbolize your marriage.

Recently, ring stacking has become a popular trend. Your Handmade Jewelry Burlington VT will tell you that many newlyweds sport multiple rings sometimes even combining metals and styles for a unique twist.

That being said, some brides opt for just one ring, and there are some excellent reasons for this:

- A single ring can be more comfortable and less bulky.
- It eliminates the worry of losing a second ring.
- No need to stress about perfectly matching rings.
- The budget for both rings can be invested into one stunning statement ring.

How to Wear Your Rings

Our Jewelry Store Burlington VT will advise you to put the wedding band on first so that it is worn nearer to your heart. A few brides are turning things around and wearing rings on different hands or not stacking them at all.

To Summarize

There is no right or wrong when it comes to wearing your engagement and wedding rings. Do what feels most comfortable for you, whether that's a traditional set, a style stack, or one show-stopping ring that symbolizes your love.