

Understanding How To Get Green Cards For Parents

Being separated from one's parents or other loved ones in the United States can be highly distressing. In the US, the green card process can be family-based. US citizens can petition for immediate family members to immigrate, while US permanent residents can petition for spouses, minors, and unmarried children aged 21 and above.

However, green card holders cannot petition for parents to come to the US. If you wish to bring your parents to the US, consult with an immigration attorney to handle the process. The green card route allows parents to immigrate permanently to the US, provided they meet the eligibility criteria.

Step-parents or adoptive parents can also immigrate. Green cards for parents permit them to live, work, and study in the US. They can travel to and from the US for a specified period. To sponsor your parents, you must meet age, citizenship, and financial requirements. Are you interested in making your parents permanent residents in the US?

Obtaining the correct information can save time and money. Due to the complexity of the green card application process, it is advisable to seek the help of an immigration lawyer. At Gehi and Associates, our immigration attorneys are ready to assist clients with their green card applications and provide excellent service.
