What Are Poppers?

Poppers refer to a category of chemical compounds known as alkyl nitrites, typically packaged in small bottles. The most common types are amyl nitrite, butyl nitrite, and isopropyl nitrite. Originally used in medical contexts, poppers have since become widely used recreationally, often for their muscle-relaxing and euphoric effects.

When inhaled, poppers act quickly, producing a brief yet intense feeling of relaxation and euphoria. This unique effect has made them popular in social settings.
