90 % of your life is how you respond to it, and 10% is what happens without any response. According to the University Grant Commission's (UGC) Quality Mandate, UGC must take steps to provide life skills 1 (including soft skills) to students enrolled in institutions of higher education, particularly at the undergraduate level.

Life skills, despite being intangible, have a crucial role in boosting students' employability and self-esteem. All the top BBA colleges in Delhi are following these life skill guidelines to prepare them for real life. For teaching them life skills, UGC has categorized it into four parts:

1. Communication Skill: A strong communication skill base is vital for learners and the efficient operation of an organization in today's age of computers and digital media.
2. Professional Skills: This skill empowers me to face the interview, participate in group discussions, make an appropriate CV, etc. It signifies the importance on how to explore career opportunities for them.
3. Leadership and Management Skill: Leaders are the basis of society, facing and triumphing over adversity and life's odds. They show others the way and develop into inspirational role models through their words and deeds, having a profound impact on social life. In today's world of cutthroat rivalries, skepticism in morals, and techno-centric complex lifestyles, it's critical to highlight the 'human' agency in community living.
4. Universal Human Values: Universal human values are ideals that people cherish and hold in common, consciously or unconsciously, in almost all places and periods and that they practice.
