

How to Dress Up Like a Diva with Maternity Skirts and Jeans

When you're expecting a baby, your body undergoes numerous changes that can make dressing up a bit of a challenge. Your growing baby bump might make your favorite jeans or skirts feel snug and uncomfortable.

But just because you're pregnant doesn't mean you have to compromise on style and wear baggy maternity dresses all the time. In fact, pregnancy can be a great time to experiment with new looks and embrace your inner diva!

Being a diva is all about confidence. It's about standing out, making a statement and owning every room you walk into. And why should pregnancy change that? No! Your body is changing, but that doesn't mean your style has to suffer.

Whether you're a fan of maternity skinny jeans, prefer maternity skirts, or love them both, there are countless ways to dress your bump in style. Here's a fun and fashionable guide on how to channel your inner diva while styling maternity jeans and skirts:

Embrace your bump

One of the first steps in dressing up like a diva during your pregnancy is embracing your baby bump. This stretchy Sara pencil maternity skirt can be a great option. If you were to invest in just one maternity skirt, this should be it!

The skirt is machine washable and made from a blend of woven viscose, nylon, and elastane. It's exceptionally well-fitted and accentuates your evolving silhouette beautifully. And because it's made from a highly flexible woven material, it's ideal for office wear.

Best of all, this maternity skirt will go a long way in your wardrobe. During the earlier stages of your pregnancy, wear the skirt with the band folded down. Once your bump grows to fill it, you can decide whether to wear the band up or down.

Choose the right fit

Make sure your maternity jeans are the right fit. Look for jeans with a stretchy waistband for ultimate comfort or a skirt with an adjustable waist to grow with you throughout your pregnancy.

The Alexa Classic maternity trouser is a versatile work pant with an over-bump jersey waistband. The relaxed straight leg makes it super comfortable, while the permanent front crease gives it a professional polish.

Don't forget the bling

Don't be afraid to accessorize with some bling, whether it's a statement necklace, bold earrings, or flashy bracelets. You can also add a brightly colored scarf, a bold handbag, or a fashionable hat.

Heels or flats?

Depending on how far along you are in your pregnancy, you might feel more comfortable in flats. But if you're still comfortable in heels, a chunky heel or wedge can be more stable and still add that diva height to your look.

Confidence is key

The most important part of dressing like a diva is confidence. Pregnant or not, a diva knows how to own her look. So, whatever outfit you choose, wear it with pride. After all, the glow of pregnancy is the best accessory a woman can wear!

Remember, maternity clothes don't have to compromise on style. You can be pregnant and still be the diva that you are.
