

Flying with the Tiniest Travelers: A Comprehensive Guide to Frontier Airlines' Infant Policy

Traveling with an infant can be both a thrilling and challenging endeavor, and Frontier Airlines endeavors to make this experience as smooth as possible for families through its thoughtful lap infant policy. Whether you're opting for a lap-held infant or considering purchasing a discounted seat for your little one, Frontier Airlines provides a variety of options to ensure a comfortable and secure flight for both parents and their precious cargo.

Lap-Held Infants:

Frontier Airlines understands that many parents prefer to keep their infants close during a flight. As such, the airline allows infants under the age of two to travel for free on an adult's lap. This budget-friendly option is not only economically sound but also ideal for those who want to maintain that close bond with their child throughout the journey.

However, it's crucial to inform the airline about the presence of your lap-held infant during the booking process. This step ensures that Frontier Airlines can provide you with essential information regarding their policies and any additional amenities available to make your journey more comfortable. A smooth check-in process and a clear understanding of the airline's policies contribute significantly to reducing stress for parents and creating a positive travel experience for the entire family.

Discounted Seats for Infants:

For those who prefer a bit more space and a dedicated seat for their infant, Frontier Airlines offers the option to purchase a discounted seat for the little one. In this case, it's important to note that an FAA-approved car seat must be used throughout the flight to comply with safety regulations. This ensures not only the safety but also the comfort of your child, allowing them to have their own space during the journey.

The flexibility to choose between a lap-held infant and a discounted seat showcases Frontier Airlines' commitment to providing options that cater to the diverse needs and preferences of traveling families.

Bassinets and Child Restraint Systems:

It's important to highlight that Frontier Airlines, in line with their commitment to affordability and flexibility, does not provide bassinets for infants. Therefore, if you opt to purchase a seat for your infant, it's highly recommended to bring along your own FAA-approved child restraint system. This ensures that your little one travels not only safely but also comfortably in their dedicated seat.

While this may require a bit of extra planning and preparation on the part of parents, it emphasizes Frontier's dedication to providing choices that suit the unique requirements of each family. By allowing parents to bring their own child restraint systems, the airline ensures that families have the flexibility to create a travel environment that suits the specific needs of their infants.

Gate-Checking Strollers:

Frontier Airlines acknowledges that navigating airports with an infant can be challenging, and they go the extra mile to add convenience to the travel experience. In line with this commitment, the airline allows parents to gate-check strollers at no extra cost. This family-friendly gesture means that you can use the stroller right up until you board the aircraft, making it easier to manage both the airport experience and the boarding process.

The ability to gate-check strollers is a practical and considerate aspect of Frontier Airlines' infant policy, making it more convenient for parents to move through the airport without the added hassle of carrying an infant and managing luggage simultaneously.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, Frontier Airlines stands out in the airline industry for its dedication to crafting an infant-friendly travel experience. The lap infant policy reflects a balance between affordability and safety, offering parents choices that suit their preferences while prioritizing the well-being and comfort of their infants.

Whether you choose to hold your infant on your lap or purchase a discounted seat, Frontier Airlines provides a range of options to make your journey enjoyable and stress-free. By allowing parents to bring their own child restraint systems and gate-check strollers at no extra cost, the airline adds thoughtful touches that simplify the travel experience for families.
