1. Recoleta

When choosing where to stay in Buenos Aires, many first-time tourists book hotels in the central region. Those who already have some experience go in the opposite direction and stay in the neighborhoods.

And among the hotel districts of Buenos Aires, Recoleta is most people's favorite place to stay.

Best Hotels in Recoleta

In the Recoleta neighborhood, close to Las Heras metro station, good hotel choices are:

Dazzler Recoleta , from the same chain that we always recommend in Buenos Aires and also in Montevideo .

ARC Recoleta .

On the other side of the neighborhood, close to the super famous (and beyond the limits of most people's budget) Alvear Hotel , the good options are:

Esplendor Plaza Francia , which after the Facultad de Derecho metro station opened, became an excellent option.

Hotel Intersur.

If you're looking for a hostel in the neighborhood, the best of all is Reina Madre Hostel , which is close to Avenida Santa Fe.

Is it worth staying in Recoleta?

Deciding to stay in Recoleta can scare many people away, believing that the aristocratic profile of the neighborhood makes accommodation prices higher.

But when you search, you will soon see that it is very easy to find hotel rates in Recoleta at the same levels as what is charged in the central region.

Recoleta is an upscale neighborhood, full of well-preserved historic buildings, with good cafes and restaurants, which always offers great opportunities for walking.

Despite being outside the Center, the neighborhood is close enough to the main attractions, a quick subway, taxi or Uber ride away.

Until a few years ago, dependence on taxis was the biggest disadvantage of staying in Recoleta, because there was no metro station in the neighborhood. But this was resolved a long time ago, after the extension of the H line in 2015.

With the metro, Recoleta has become the obvious answer when looking for where to stay in Buenos Aires.

If you are considering booking a hotel in any other area of the city, it is a good idea to reconsider and see if it is not worth staying there and enjoying the best that Buenos Aires has to offer.

2. Palermo Soho

Palermo is the largest neighborhood in Buenos Aires. Palermo is so big that it has several informal subdivisions according to its characteristics.

Two of these denominations, Palermo Soho and Palermo Hollywood, are great options when choosing where to stay in Buenos Aires.

Palermo Soho is where most of the activity in Palermo is. Soho is a modern neighborhood with sophisticated shops and home to the best restaurants in the city.

The central axis of Palermo Soho are its two squares, Plaza Serrano and Plaza Armenia, from which the neighborhood's commercial area radiates. Staying close to them puts you in the center of all the activity in Palermo, although a little far from the metro stations, as line D crosses the neighborhood along Avenida Santa Fe.

In Palermo Soho it is worth trying:

The Nuss Buenos Aires Soho , to be located right in the center of the neighborhood; Soho Point , if you're looking for a more affordable option.
