

Emmanuel Katto Understanding and Promoting Renewable Energy in Africa

Emka, Emmanuel Katto, is a visionary and businessman from Uganda who wants to lead a revolution in the energy system of Africa. His conviction that using renewable energy will not only raise Africa's profile in the international community but also solve major energy issues is motivated by his commitment to sustainable development and economic growth.

Renewable energy-related activities have the ability to strengthen the economy and create new jobs. Diverse job opportunities that can improve local communities are provided by the renewable energy sector, which includes anything from manufacturing solar panels to constructing wind farms and managing hydropower plants.
