

Returning to the starting lineup after 3G of Lee Kang-in → Playing in Korean uniforms

Lee Kang-in (23, Paris Saint-Germain) will return to the starting list after three games and play in a Korean uniform.

Paris Saint-Germain (PSG) will play the 25th round of the 2023-24 French League against Reims at 9 p.m. on the 10th in Paris, France.

For PSG, Navas, Hakimi, Danilo, Beraldo, Hernandez, Soler, Ugarte, Jair-Emery, Lee Kang-in, Ramos and Barcola will start.

Lee Kang-in will start on the day. Lee Kang-in was substituted at the start of the second half of the UEFA Champions League's round of 16 second leg against Real Sociedad during the week. Lee Kang-in assisted Kylian Mbappe in scoring by scoring an accurate penetration pass from the back in the 11th minute.

Thanks to his performance against Sociedad, Lee Kang-in was back on the starting list after three games. He started against Stade Ren, but was replaced at the start of the second half. Since then, he was substituted at the end of the second half against AS Monaco and played only four minutes, and there was a worried look as he played as a substitute in the match against Sociedad, but he took the opportunity by himself by creating an attack point.

Lee Kang-in has played in 20 games in all tournaments this season, scoring three goals and three assists. In the league, his last offensive point was one assist against the Mets in December last year. It is necessary to accumulate more attack points to establish himself in the main competition. Meanwhile, PSG will play in a match wearing a uniform marked with Hangeul in the match against Reims. It is the second time for PSG to play in a match against Le Havre in December last year after wearing the uniform for the first time. PSG will play in a match wearing a flower-patterned uniform and Hangeul for its Korean fans.
