

Women Patola palazzo suit Designs Online

Patola Palazzo pants for women first became a popular trend in the late 1960s and early 1970s. The style was reminiscent of the wide-legged cuffed trousers worn by some women fond of avant-garde fashions in the 1930s and 1940s. Palazzo pants flare out evenly from the waist to the ankle and are therefore different from bellbottoms, which are snug until they flare out from the knee. Patola Palazzo pants are also not to be confused with Gaucho trousers, which only extend down to mid-calf length.

The other natural fibre textiles are popular fabrics for this design. Patola Palazzo trousers are less frequently seen during the winter months, but they may be found in wool or heavy synthetic fabrics as fine. Patola is used in silk threads wrapped in real gold and silver wires to decorate satin and velvet fabrics. Along with the threads, other opulent embellishments such as sequins, beads, precious and semi-precious stones and pearls were also sewn on.
